Caught On Tape -- See A Job Interview At Cain Campaign HQ To Replace The Staffer Who Leaked The Sexual Harrassment Information

Author : michaelbloomer

With great luck for us, one of my buddies was snooping around the Herman Cain campaign HQ this afternoon. There, after being summarily barred from entry, he sidled to the nearby alley. He immediately noticed a trash bin labeled "Shreds," and wasted no time before rummaging through it, hoping to find *some*thing, *any*thing newsworthy. He did. There, he unearthed something accidentally dropped into the shredded paper bin. It was a DVD labeled

> "Herman Cain Campaign - staff employment interview to replace the bum who told the press about the sexual harrassment settlement. 10-31 - 2011, for internal use *ONLY"

Realizing the potential political value of this DVD, particularly what details it might reveal about the harrassment charges and the settlement, my pal contacted me. When I viewed the DVD this a.m. its value was obvious. It doesn't provide any details about Cain's pecadillos, but it does provide a peek into the kind of person the Cain campaign is looking for to replace the infamous (to Cain) leaker. . . . .

A few observations before viewing:

- The date on the title scroll - 10-230-2011 - is obviously a typo, the date on the outside of the DVD is 10-31-2011.
- Note that the interview is attended by a dozen or more Cain staffers. They freely express their opinions; often one can detect some giggling. Cain's folks run a gut-wrenching interview, and
- Note that I provide subtitles for our Portuguese subscribers. Those who do not speak Portuguese may ignore these subtitles.

So, here's the vid. How does it compare with your job interviews?
