Today, the White House responded to a spate of petitions from southern states whose signatories sought permission for their states to "peacefully" leave the union. In a letter from informing the signatories, Jon Carson, Director of the Office of Public Engagement[1. Our States Remain United, Jon Carson, White House Office of Public Engagement, Jan. 12, 2013] explained in detail the reasons for the government's denial of the eight petitions, but as you'll read below, Mr. Carson provided a plan that will resolve all issues put forth by the petitioners:[2. Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, and Texas]
