Last Wednesday, AP reported:

> WASHINGTON -- More than 1,000 puppeteers and public broadcasting supporters have signed on for a march on the National Mall in Washington three days before the election.
>
> The so-called Million Puppet March being planned online is scheduled for Nov. 3. By Wednesday morning, more than 1,000 participants had responded on Facebook, saying they would attend.

It didn't take long for a response from those who believe they are already overtaxed, and also think that PBS, and Big Bird, ought to be jettisoned asap. So, to get their point across, this disparate group of rugged individuals has closed ranks and have scheduled a counter demonstration to draw attention from the puppeteers.

Via methods some who are wedded to technicalities would call theft, They Will Say *ANYTHING! has obtained the first poster promoting the event. It will be released tomorrow afternoon by the counter demonstration group. the Campaign To Help Billionaires Out.
