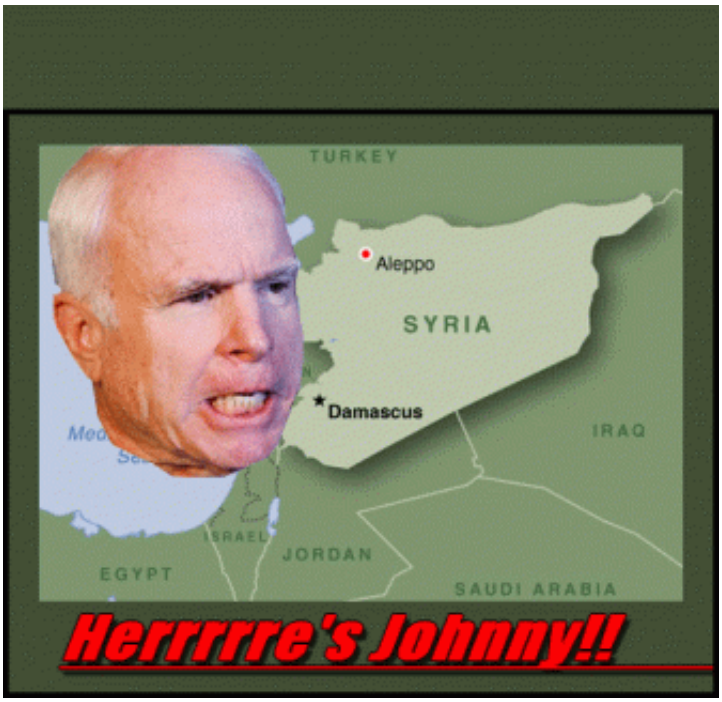
TWSA! Snapshot Series - McCain To Syria : "Herrrrrrrre's Johnny!!!"

Author : michaelbloomer



Michael Matthew Bloomer, June 13, 2013

For McCain (and Lindsey Graham) it's never enough . . . Why does McCain continue to occupy a pre-eminent place among America's foreign policy experts? There are few among us more irresponsible about the lives and fortunes of others, his country's - or other countries' - men and women:

"But providing arms alone is not sufficient. That alone is not enough to change the military balance of power on the ground against Assad. The president must rally an international coalition to take military actions to degrade Assad's ability to use air power and ballistic missiles and to move and resupply his forces around the battlefield by air. This can be done, as we have said many times, using stand-off weapons such as cruise missiles."

Senator John McCain
excerpt from McCain/Lindsey Graham statement about President Obama's decision to arm Syrian opposition forces, Senate floor, June 13, 2013

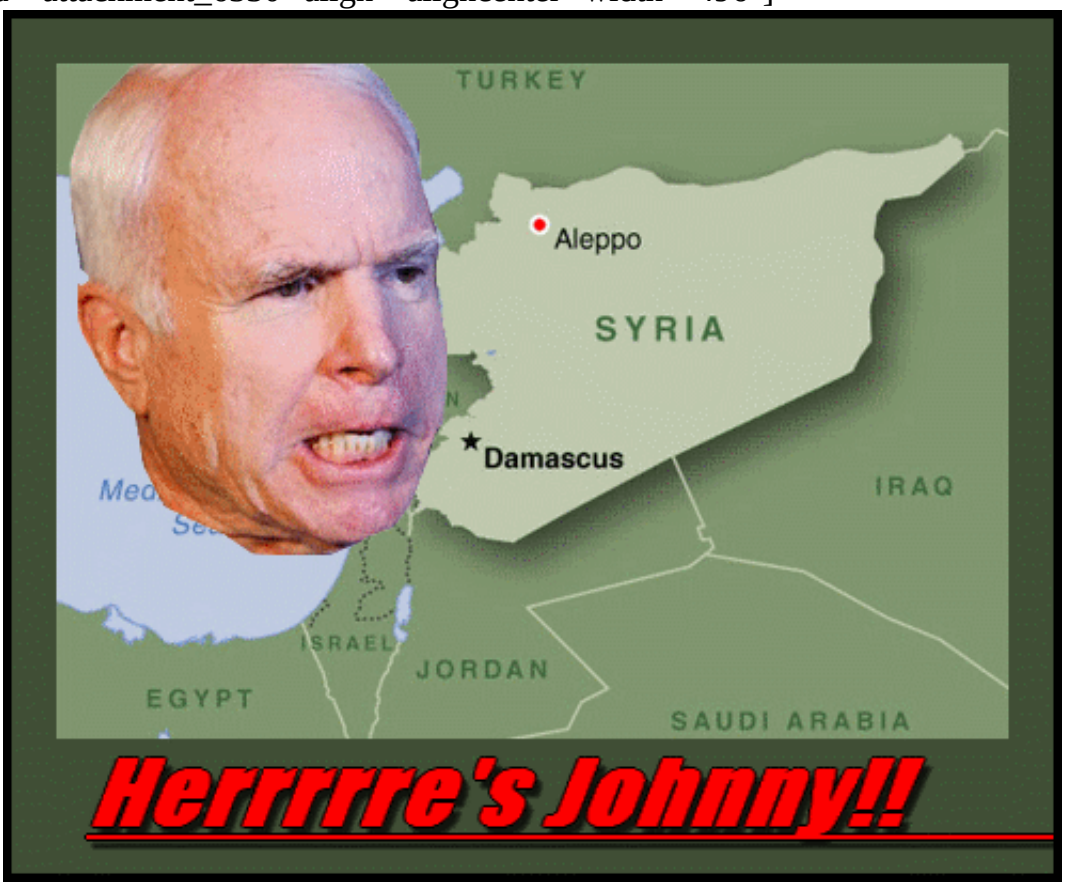
More muscular intervention than the Obama administration was necessary, he continued,

> "Otherwise, you are going to see a regional conflict the consequences of which we will be paying for a long, long time."

Otherwise what? As opposed to what, Senator?[1. Our representative catalogue of McCain's nearly unsullied record: "Were You Right Or Wrong, Senator?" The Legacy Of Wrong That Is Senator John McCain, A Small Sampling] Iraq? Afghanistan?

[caption id="attachment_6330" align="aligncenter" width="496"]



June 13, 2013. From the Senate floor John McCain doubles down on his indisputably remarkable success record of predicting the progress and results of U.S. foreign intervention.[/caption]